Chapter 3

IN THE BEGINNINGS OF GOVERNMENT IN THE UNITED STATES

The roots of American government reach deep into the past. Our system of government did not suddenly spring into being as the result of some political magician's wand. Nor was it pulled out of thin air by the French, Spanish, Dutch, Norwegian, and other European settlers. The Founding fathers at Philadelphia in the summer of 1787 . . . Rather, it is of what was to become the United States. But it was the English who came in the largest numbers. And it was the English who came to stay. The thirteen colonies that were founded for 1,500 miles along the Atlantic seaboard.

These early pioneers who cleared the wilderness and fought off the Indians had to back out their own systems of government. But they came here in search of greater free-

SETTLERS AT WORK

Early Americans had to live together in harmony or they would not survive. They so-called "government in order to live," the beginning of our government today of which are to be found today . . . county, borough, jury, sheriff, coroner, and justice of the peace, for example. And all of these were well-known in England long before the first English . . . were heard of in America.

(1) The Three Concepts of Limited Government and Civil Liberties. They brought with them, too, the twin ideas of limited government and civil liberties. That is, that government is not all-powerful, that government is limited in what it may do and, generally, that it is limited in the same that each man has certain rights that government cannot injure or take away. These great principles of freedom were proclaimed in such historic English documents as the Magna Carta in 1215, the Petition of Right in 1628, and the Bill of Rights and the Act of Toleration of 1689.

(2) The Concept of Representative Government. A third vitally important concept brought to America in English ships was that of representative government. For centuries there had been developing in England the
